SCOTCH WICHMANN - BIOGRAPHY

"You're one funny, funny fu★ker."
—Kurtis Matthews, Celebrity Rehab

"The crowd loved you."
—Executive Director, Atascadero State Hospital

SCOTCH WICHMANN is a writer, performance artist, actor, and stand-up comedian whose madcap riffs about his trailerpark childhood, neurotic delusions, and Hollywood obsessions spurred the San Francisco Chronicle to describe him as "like eating and snorting [drugs]...then freebasing...then reaching for the turkey baster." A two-time finalist in Northern California's Battle of the Bay Comedy Competition, Scotch also works as a fast-paced comedy M.C. and host—he's kept audiences rolling before national headliners like Bill Burr, Barry Sobel, Laurie Kilmartin, Brent Weinbach, Eddie Brill, and many more.

An alum of Bay Area Theater Sports (BATS) and The Standup Project comedy road troupe, Scotch became known as the hyperactive host of the wildly popular Hump Day Comedy Show, a weekly 2-hour marathon of 30 comics at the Comedy Clubhouse in downtown San Francisco. A featured performer in both the Hollywood Fringe and Edinburgh Fringe festivals, Scotch has also appeared on the BBC's Show Me the Funny reality TV show, and performs regularly across the country at clubs like the Comedy Store, the Purple Onion, the Improv, Rooster T. Feathers, the Gotham Comedy Club in NYC, and The Edge in Chicago.

Scotch began as a magician, actor, and performance artist in Los Angeles, where his experimental live works were featured at venues like the L.A. Performing Arts Center, Museum of Contemporary Art, LACE, HIGHWAYS, and the University of California. Following a two-year stint as a radio announcer on Central California's 1340 KKAM, he attracted a swarm of press from CNN, NBC, FOX, NPR, Maxim, The Washington Post, and The New York Times as the crazy spokesman for cracked-out coffee company Meth Coffee.

His writing has appeared in magazines, anthologies, and online. His debut novel, Two Performance Artists Kidnap Their Boss And Do Things With Him—a screwball dark comedy about two performance artists struggling to make it—was published in 2014. The book won a Bronze Medal at the 2014 Independent Publisher Book Awards, and it was an Amazon Breakthrough Novel Contest First Round Finalist that critics called "possibly the funniest caper ever written...what you'd get if Fear and Loathing, Office Space, and Jackass made a baby."
